ANOTHER FILM EPIC MADE FROM FAMED STORY BY DICKENS

Out of the French revolution and through the maelstrom of Charles Dickens' 'A Tale of Two Cities' comes a film which sends to a new top the reputation which Ronald Coleman has gained on the screen

"A Tale of Two Cities" now playing at the Palace depicts a heroism of one man and the violent strife and suffering of a nation reborn to democracy. The depth of thought which it evokes is matched only by the majestic and spectacular grandeur of its scenes

Coleman's art never was more vibrant. His portrayal of an exceedingly difficult role places him on a pedestal from which he can never fall. He is the unassuming knave of living, the life he acts the ability to make natural that which is artificial

The story is that of an English attorney capable but given to drink. He contacts a young French aristocrat being tried on a framed charge of treason. Although the defendant is of aristocratic blood his sympathies are with the downtrodden. Coleman as the attorney Sydney Carton expresses the would be framer and frees the Frenchman. However, a love with the same driven English girl, Lucie Manette played by Elizabeth Allen. The aristocrat wins her hand after which a chain of circumstances lead him toward the guillotine and a series of climactic events which rivet the attention

The supporting cast which includes Edna May Oliver, Reginald Owen, Basil Rathbone, Blanche Yurka and Henry B. Walthall is well selected and gives an exceptional performance. And by the way a couple of bouques are in order for the work done by director Jack Conway who will probably be remembered for his exceptional direction of 'Viva Villa'

A new film described by Edwin C. Hill and a couple of other shorts balance the fare—K. G. T.

Daily Pattern for Home Use

BY ANNE ADAMS

A "FORTY EIGHT" MAKE FROM THAT REVEALS CHIC-CONCEALS WEIGHT

Everyone knows what a new dress does for a woman. It's sure to do still more if the lines of it are lovelier, more slenderizing and flattering than any she's worn before. Here's a frock you'll enjoy, entertaining in evening, for restaurant dining, club-meetings or church functions the winter through. The soft fabric is a smart way to cope with taken-for-granted pounds above the waist, just as rayon slacks detract from rounder breadth—and diagonal seaming from too generous hips. Make this frock in a novel, synthetic or triple sheer georgette satin for a dressy version and you'll be prepared for any invitation—any occasion.

Pattern 2555 is available in sizes 34 36 38 40 42 44 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4 yards. 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

ANTIOCH WILL HONOR MEMORY OF MANN

To Celebrate First President's Centennial in 1937 and Dedicate Statue Next Spring

By The Associated Press
YELLOW SPRINGS, O., Dec. 26—Antioch college is busy these days preparing to honor her first president, Horace Mann, whose centennial will be celebrated in 1937.

The opening gun of the celebration will be fired here with the dedication next spring of a replica of a bronze statue of Mann that stands in the grounds of the state house at Boston Mass.

The statue is a gift to the college by Hugh T. Birch, an Antioch alumnus who as a small boy knew Mann. Birch discovered the model of the original statue hid in a bronze foundry in Munich, Germany where it had been preserved nearly three quarters of a century since the sculptress, Emma Stebbins, created it in 1855. Birch ordered a replica made and shipped to Antioch.

Mann came to Antioch in 1853 and died six years later worn out by his hard labor but he left an indelible mark on American educational methods.

Antioch known as 'the little Harvard of the west' had achieved fame even in those bygone days and was visited by such celebrities as Emerson, Hawthorne and others lured by the then radical educational principles which are now universally accepted.

Before coming to Antioch Mann had done signal work in informing the Massachusetts common school system and is generally known as the father of the American common school. The statue of Mann in Boston was largely paid for with the pennies of school children.

Birch, who graduated from Antioch in 1869 is a retired Chicago attorney and in 1929 gave the school a beautifully wooded 850 acre tract of land known as Glen Helen in memory of his daughter.

The Call form sportsman claimed the son of Pennants for a mere $3,500 in 1934. Since Jan. 1 he has won $38,120 and ranks with Discovery as the one to beat in the 1935 Santa Anita handicap.
